From Bystander to Upstander

The role of the bystander is critical when dealing with bullying. We can give students strategies to deal with bullying but strategies aren’t always enough. It takes confidence and courage for students to intervene in what can be stressful situations.

Welcome the students and tell them that today’s lesson will focus on one of the most important issues in school outside of academic progress – bullying. Review the definition of bullying - repeated verbal, physical or psychological abuse accompanied by a real or perceived imbalance of power. (Perhaps have a student write it on the board.)

ASK: Let’s review the basic types of bullying. Last year you discussed four basic types. Do you remember what they are?

Reinforce their answers as you guide them to identify the following four basic types — physical, verbal, social/relational, and cyberbullying. (Cyberbullying will be covered in the next lesson.) There are variations, but most can fit into these broad categories.

Show the Discovering Projectable 3.5.1 and make sure students understand the types of bullying.

ASK: Last year you also discussed strategies for dealing with bullying, both as the bullied and as a bystander. This lesson will focus on the role of the bystander in a bullying situation.

Time permitting you may ask students if they recall some of the strategies for dealing with physical, verbal, and social bullying, or you may go directly to Discovering Projectable 3.5.2 and review the strategies with the class, asking for examples as you cover the material.

DISCOVERING 10 MINUTES

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Types of Bullying</th>
<th>Characteristics</th>
<th>Example</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Physical Bullying</td>
<td>Time to control or gain power</td>
<td>Throwing, punching, shouting</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Verbal Bullying</td>
<td>Verbal threats or statements</td>
<td>Name-calling, threatening to tell lies</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Social/Relational Bullying</td>
<td>Social or emotional abuse</td>
<td>Ignoring, exclude from social gatherings</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cyberbullying</td>
<td>Use of the internet</td>
<td>Emails, texts</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

INSTRUCTION

ACTIVITY 1

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>If you’re a bystander</th>
<th>Example</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>APPROACHING a bully...</td>
<td>“I think you’re being a little harsh.”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ADOPTING a “Not my problem” attitude</td>
<td>“I’m just watching.”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Avoiding the bully...</td>
<td>“I don’t see this happening.”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Facing the bully...</td>
<td>“Well, let’s try and work things out.”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Reason with the student doing the bullying...</td>
<td>“You need to stop. This is not okay.”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Remind the student doing the bullying...</td>
<td>“You need to stop. This is not okay.”</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Tell the students that it’s one thing to say that you should all be active bystanders to stop bullying, but it’s another thing to actually step forward to help. When bullying occurs there are some very formidable issues involved in what can be a very intense situation.
Have students research the community resources that are available to combat bullying and address student mental health issues. Students could work individually or in groups to create posters that identify the resources, explain the purpose, and provide the contact information.

Recognizing the warning signs is an important first step in taking action against bullying. Send home the Family Connection Worksheet and have students share the warning signs of bullying with their family or caregivers.

As a class meet with your school administration and student council to examine the role that students can play in improving school climate. What is currently being done and how could the students play a more consistent and active role in reducing bullying and harassment, improving student mental health, and creating a safer and more secure school?

The bystander effect is a well-known psychological phenomenon. Have students conduct research on the bystander effect and why it occurs in many people. Have them prepare a short presentation about what they learned and explain how their knowledge can be applied to bullying prevention in their school.

Discuss the reasons people are reluctant to intervene

SAY: Let’s say you and some other students are in the hallway and a few feet away one of your classmates is confronting another. The aggressor is both verbally and physically abusing the other student — calling them names, shoving, invading their personal space, an obvious bullying situation. You know enough to know that it’s wrong.

ASK: What might be some reasons that you or others are reluctant to intervene?

Guide the discussion to encourage students to respond. You or a volunteer can write their responses on the board. To sum up and categorize their responses display Connecting Projectable 3.5.3 and discuss any items that were not mentioned by the students.

ASK: Does anything change if you are a friend one of the participants? Does it make it harder or easier to intervene?

Use a creative grouping strategy to divide the class into groups of 3-5. Distribute Student Handout: Practicing and tell students that they’re going to do an activity that has them explore strategies they can use to overcome these issues and move from being a passive bystander to an active bystander — an “Upstander.”

Be an upstander

Review the instructions and assign each group one of the issues. Duplication is preferred i.e. it would be best if at least two different groups had the same issue. Allow 10 minutes for the students to complete their portion of the activity, then have the groups share their responses and discuss as a class. Use the following questions to help discuss each of the reasons bystanders are reluctant to intervene.

- What are the reasons you may be reluctant to help?
- What can you do to breakthrough your reluctance and intervene? Is there an opposite reason you can use to intervene? (Is this really the kind of friend I want? Who will stand up for me if I’m bullied? Maybe I need to be part of a different herd.)
- Is there a way you could get other bystanders to support or join in your intervention?
- Once the bullying has ended are there things you can do to support the victim?
- Would it help if the majority of students at this school were active bystanders? i.e. Would bullying decrease if it was common for other students to intervene? Is their strength in numbers?

Have students hand in their Practicing Handout after the discussion is complete.

Discuss the reasons people are reluctant to intervene

SAY: Let’s say you and some other students are in the hallway and a few feet away one of your classmates is confronting another. The aggressor is both verbally and physically abusing the other student — calling them names, shoving, invading their personal space, an obvious bullying situation. You know enough to know that it’s wrong.

ASK: What might be some reasons that you or others are reluctant to intervene?

Guide the discussion to encourage students to respond. You or a volunteer can write their responses on the board. To sum up and categorize their responses display Connecting Projectable 3.5.3 and discuss any items that were not mentioned by the students.

ASK: Does anything change if you are a friend one of the participants? Does it make it harder or easier to intervene?

Use a creative grouping strategy to divide the class into groups of 3-5. Distribute Student Handout: Practicing and tell students that they’re going to do an activity that has them explore strategies they can use to overcome these issues and move from being a passive bystander to an active bystander — an “Upstander.”

Be an upstander

Review the instructions and assign each group one of the issues. Duplication is preferred i.e. it would be best if at least two different groups had the same issue. Allow 10 minutes for the students to complete their portion of the activity, then have the groups share their responses and discuss as a class. Use the following questions to help discuss each of the reasons bystanders are reluctant to intervene.

- What are the reasons you may be reluctant to help?
- What can you do to breakthrough your reluctance and intervene? Is there an opposite reason you can use to intervene? (Is this really the kind of friend I want? Who will stand up for me if I’m bullied? Maybe I need to be part of a different herd.)
- Is there a way you could get other bystanders to support or join in your intervention?
- Once the bullying has ended are there things you can do to support the victim?
- Would it help if the majority of students at this school were active bystanders? i.e. Would bullying decrease if it was common for other students to intervene? Is their strength in numbers?

Have students hand in their Practicing Handout after the discussion is complete.
Practicing Resource:

Student Handout

---

BUILDING SKILLS BEYOND THE LESSON

Brown Bag It!

PRACTICING

Some schools have adopted a “no one sits alone at lunch” program. Students can search the web to discover the way in which other schools have introduced the program or they can develop the goals/outcomes and strategies themselves.

Research It!

PRACTICING

Have students work together in teams to research and create a presentation that explores the issue of “othering” and how to combat it. “Othering” is a human behavior that divides people into “us and them” by singling out some for aggression once they are branded as the despised “other.” The common denominator is cruel speech and actions.

---

Campaign!

APPLYING

Have students create a plan to organize and conduct a schoolwide anti-bullying campaign. Guest speakers can be contacted, signage and posters can be created, events can be held, merchandise (t-shirts) can be created, and local community organizations may be able to help fund or support the program.

Film It!

APPLYING

Have students work together to write, act, and record short dramatic videos that demonstrate ways students can transform from passive to active bystanders. They can be presented at the end of the Lions Quest course at a school anti-bullying “film festival.”

---

Reflecting

Display Reflecting Projectable 3.5.4. Students use their class notebooks to reflect individually and as a class on what they learned in this lesson.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>What?</th>
<th>Why is the role of the bystander so important in stopping bullying?</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>So What?</td>
<td>What is the main reason that would prevent you from becoming an active bystander?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Now What?</td>
<td>What are some strategies you can use to overcome your reluctance and intervene when you see bullying?</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

---

Applying Resource:

Student Handout

---

ASSESSING

PRACTICING (INFORMAL FORMATIVE ASSESSMENT) Review student responses to the Practicing Activity to assess how well they have learned the strategies they can use to become an active bystander.

APPLYING (FORMAL FORMATIVE ASSESSMENT) Review student responses to the Applying Activity to assess how well student completed the lesson objectives.