Inviting Friends In

INCLUSIVE VS. EXCLUSIVE BEHAVIORS

REMEMBER THAT

- inclusive behaviors tend to make people feel more comfortable.
- exclusive behaviors can hurt others' feelings.
- inclusive behaviors can make people feel more comfortable with you.
- exclusive behaviors can keep us from learning about others and their perspectives.

After discussing making friends, answer the following questions:

Which inclusive behaviors did your family member engage in with his or her friend?

How did your family member feel when he or she met the friend for the first time?

How are your family member's inclusive or exclusive behaviors similar to your own? Which might you try to incorporate into your inclusive tools?
